

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a computerized image-viewing device that allows the user to sequentially advance or reverse stored images by voice recognition, remote control, navigational buttons or one of the many kinds of adaptable computer switches. There is a display screen LCD or Plasma-related that is connected to a computer box where images are stored, arranged and edited.